PETA does good

Over the years, I have taken several cats to PETA for low-cost spay or neuter surgeries, and I have always found PETA's staff members to be caring, courteous and professional. PETA does such good work in the local community, from offering low-cost veterinary services to giving away dog houses and straw to provide a small measure of comfort to dogs who are forced to live outside in all weather extremes.

PETA is an asset to our community, and it is disheartening to see the organization attacked in hateful ads such as the one that ran in the Jan. 28 edition of The Pilot.
