

Is There a New

Boston Strangler?

Figures 1 and 2 in Triggers for Mother Love (bit.ly/3CuouJV) | Margaret S. Livingstone (bit.ly/3rPG7z8) | CC BY-NC-ND (bit.ly/3CTEzKx)

A baby monkey strangled to death in a Harvard laboratory.

Experimenter Margaret Livingstone pulls baby monkeys away from their distraught mothers soon after birth and imprisons them in steel cages, where they cling desperately to pathetic cloth “surrogates.” One monkey got her head caught inside the fabric after experimenters failed to notice that she had torn a hole in it. Later, she was found dead, her limp body hanging, strangled by the only “mother” Livingstone had ever allowed her to have.

The new Boston Strangler’s deadly spree must end.
Harvard, shut down Livingstone’s monkey laboratory today.

PETA