

DID YOU KNOW

you have the right to refuse to dissect animals
in New Hampshire?

It's true! Each year, countless animals (including frogs, cats, and birds) are cruelly killed and then cut up in classrooms across the country—even though humane methods exist. Studies have shown that students who use humane dissection methods perform just as well as—and often better than—students who cut up animals. You don't have to dissect! Explain to your teacher that you won't and that a policy gives you the right to say NO to doing so in New Hampshire. This is what it says:

New Hampshire Student Choice Policy

Any student, for any reason, may choose to replace an activity that causes harm to animals, whether they be already dead, such in dissections, or living, such as animal testing, with an alternative activity that does not. Those instructors that teach dissection/vivisection in their classes should verbally announce the Student Choice Policy to all students on the first day of their class, and include the policy in their course syllabus. The policy is also available for review on the district website. Teachers should also inform their students that alternatives to killing, harming, or dissecting animals will be made available to them at the time of the activity in which animals will be used. Students must inform their teachers of their intention to replace an activity prior to the start of that activity. Teachers should include alternatives to the activities covered by this policy in their curriculum, and syllabi, and information on the replacement process should be provided in course syllabi and Program of Studies, or Course Catalogue.

DID YOU KNOW

you have the right to refuse to dissect animals
in New Hampshire?

It's true! Each year, countless animals (including frogs, cats, and birds) are cruelly killed and then cut up in classrooms across the country—even though humane methods exist. Studies have shown that students who use humane dissection methods perform just as well as—and often better than—students who cut up animals. You don't have to dissect! Explain to your teacher that you won't and that a policy gives you the right to say NO to doing so in New Hampshire. This is what it says:

New Hampshire Student Choice Policy

Any student, for any reason, may choose to replace an activity that causes harm to animals, whether they be already dead, such in dissections, or living, such as animal testing, with an alternative activity that does not. Those instructors that teach dissection/vivisection in their classes should verbally announce the Student Choice Policy to all students on the first day of their class, and include the policy in their course syllabus. The policy is also available for review on the district website. Teachers should also inform their students that alternatives to killing, harming, or dissecting animals will be made available to them at the time of the activity in which animals will be used. Students must inform their teachers of their intention to replace an activity prior to the start of that activity. Teachers should include alternatives to the activities covered by this policy in their curriculum, and syllabi, and information on the replacement process should be provided in course syllabi and Program of Studies, or Course Catalogue.

Animal dissection is unnecessary and cruel.
Exercise your rights and stand up for
animals by choosing not to dissect them.
For more information or to get
involved, visit CutOutDissection.com
or e-mail us at hello@peta2.com.

peta2

© iStock.com/thinksky

Animal dissection is unnecessary and cruel.
Exercise your rights and stand up for
animals by choosing not to dissect them.
For more information or to get
involved, visit CutOutDissection.com
or e-mail us at hello@peta2.com.

peta2

© iStock.com/thinksky