3.13(b)(2)

Veterinary care for dogs.

The licensee did not keep records of treatment procedures performed for all dogs at the facility. Medical records show that a veterinarian prescribed antibiotic treatment for a six-year-old female Beagle (tattoo POC-1), but there are no records showing that the treatments were given. The veterinarian diagnosed that the beagle had interdigital cysts on January 5, 2026, and prescribed a treatment of topical antibiotic ointment and oral antibiotics to be given "until better". At the time of inspection, the beagle's enclosure has colored tabs on it which indicate that she is still under treatment and reminding staff to give the medications, but there is no record that confirms that the treatments were given. Complete medical records, including records confirming that prescribed treatments are performed, are important to ensure that the veterinarian's directives are being followed. Dealers and research facilities must keep such medical records and make them available for APHIS inspection.
