Guess where the Navy is failing

The Navy's latest victims weren't enemy combatants. They were animals.

Putting pigs into diving suits, forcing them through simulated deep dives, and watching as they suffer from decompression sickness, painful blood vessel blockages, paralysis, and hemorrhaging and then die is not military readiness. It's taxpayer-funded cruelty.

Nearly nine decades.

Millions wasted.

Countless animals forced to endure the bends.

Still no change in core treatments.

There is something sinful about making animals suffer when better options exist.

Tell Secretary Hegseth to permanently sink decompression-sickness and oxygen-toxicity experiments on animals and redirect those funds to superior, human-relevant science.
